Where? At my door. At the Eagle Grocery. What in the world is it, my dear? It is at the Eagle Grocery, a mammoth stock of Groceries, and at the lowest prices you ever heard of. The Eagle has been reading the papers and kept posted on what was being offered for sale. They don't say anything about Terbacker and Candy, and other good things like that. It is not pickle dishes you want now, it is Candy. The Eagle has 2,000 pounds of candy for sale cheap. Christmas committees are invited to call and get my prices. TAYLOR FLICK.
A Biographical Sketch of the Populist
Nominee for Governor.

Taylor Flick, the populist candidate for Governor of Nebraska, was born in Bealeville, Washington county, Pa. His father, Peter Flick, was a saddle and harness maker, but when saddle making centered in the larger factories, he became a farmer and coal miner. Peter Flick died in 1853, leaving a family consisting of the mother, two boys and four girls. Mr. Flick not yet 20 years of age, took charge of the coal mine, and never allowed the family to separate except as the girls married and the boys went into the army. In 1858 Mr. Flick, still unmarried, emigrated with his family to a farm in Livingston county, Illinois, and for five years was engaged in farming, doing the work principally himself. His father was a whig but he was not among those who being born in a party, remained it for ever. In 1856 he did not vote, being at that time on a prospecting tour in Illinois. In 1860 he voted for Stephen A. Douglas, and was married about a month after the election of that year. When the war began in 1861, his two brothers who were still members of his family, went into the army of the North, one of them as a private, the other as a second lieutenant, but he being to near sighted for a soldier, did not go. In 1863 he became one of the "General Agents" of C. H. McCormick brothers and continued with them until 1869. Up to his employment with McCormick brothers he had considerable difficulty in making a living for his family. But during the war, times were good and many old and apparently worthless claims were paid up by the farmers who were receiving very high prices in very cheap money. And as he had percentage on all collections, and a very large percent on old claims, the business was quite profitable. During these years his sisters were married and the boys after returning from the army went into business for themselves. In 1872 he emigrated to Kansas and settled in Hutchinson, Reno county, and in less than a month his mother, died, and there he old happy Pennsylvania family ended.

Mr. Flick became a republican during the war, and as such was elected First Mayor of Hutchinson, and afterwards Supt. of Public Instruction of Reno County. At this time he was practicing law in the city of Hutchinson, having been admitted in 1869. In 1874 he purchased a town sight on the Santa Fe Railroad which the Company had laid out and called Petersburg. Owing to contentions in the preceding legislature the town was not in any county. The next winter he visited the legislature and had the territory established as a county, and named Edwards after a friend of his who in recognition whereof erected two large two-story, fine brick buildings on one of the principal corners of the town. He and the citizens of the town also changed the name of the town from Petersburg, to Kinsley in honor of a Massachusetts man who agreed to erect a church which was to cost about $2500. Mr. Flick resided in Kinsley until 1884 and during that time was elected and served as County Attorney, and as a member of the legislature. He was elected twice to the legislature but was not allowed to take his seat the first time, it being claimed that Edwards county did not have sufficient inhabitants. He also had to contend with the same objection when last elected but was finally admitted. This was in 1875 and 1877. The population of Edwards county was light because bands of hostile Indians had been continually passing through it. Mr. Flick has always entertained views unfavorable to saloon keeping and in 1884 voted for and supported John P. St. John for President. In 1888 he was a tourist in California, and in 1893 was residing in Oklahoma City hence did not vote at either of said elections. He has been a member of the Peoples' Independent Party ever since its organization. He resided in Broken Bow, Nebraska since 1893. Voted for W. J. Bryan in 1896, but with the understanding that the party would return to its principles as soon as the election was over. Most of his time at present is employed in experimenting in electricity for which purpose he has a complete outfit. In 1892 he published a book, entitled "The Three Circuits" a "Study of the Primary Forces."
